I am writing this letter in response to an e-mail I received about genetically engineered cows and the milk that is sold from them. I have known that the government wants to genetically engineer more and more foods and doesn't feel any labeling is appropriate. I adamantly disagree with this. I already only buy organic produce, dairy, meats and spices. This causes financial hardship for my family, but at least I have the personal reassurance that we are eating wholesome, non-engineered foods with no chemical additives.

Reconsider your ideas and the health of our nation. We desperately need honesty from our government. Why not start with your agency to give the American people a good feeling about government not to mention the fairness of advertising what is really in our products.

Thank you,

Joy Sparandera
